Product feature!

People expect that the food they eat at restaurants is wholesome and safe for consumption. Foodborne disease is at best unpleasant; at worst it can be fatal. HACCP is an increasingly important system to prevent food safety problems by controlling critical points in food handling. It is a system for identifying specific hazards and preventive measures for their control. Although not legislation yet, many center managers require restaurants to pass surveillance tests to verify whether their surfaces are adequately sanitized.

HACCP Principles:

- Using food grade SABS approved chemicals
- Colour coding different sections of the kitchen that it is possible to identify when and where problems arise.
- Ensuring that each section has its own chemical station and cleaning equipment to prevent cross-contamination.
- Phasing out wooden brushware as wood harbours bacteria.
- Introducing cloths and scourers which can be disposed of within two days.

Joe Soap can help you to convert to HACCP in five easy steps:

Step One: Conduct an on-site audit

Step Two: Produce a report on the findings

Step Three: Develop recommendations, identifying the products required and the cost thereof

Step Four: Prepare a file documenting your HACCP implementation strategy

Step Five: Free in-house HACCP training around the use of chemicals

“Our HACCP advice is personalized and flexible because each store is different. We understand that there are costs involved so our recommendations make as much use as possible of what you already have.”

Employee of the month [Michael Dube]

Michael came to South Africa from Zimbabwe in 1990, where he met and married his South Africa wife, Precious. He started out at Joe Soap in 1996 as a drum washer. After a couple of years he was promoted to be a driver's assistant. Now, at 36, Michael is Joe Soap's priceless office manager. He's responsible for receiving orders, creating invoices and converting these into itemized delivery notes, so that the drivers know what they need to pull for a particular order.

On weekends Michael can be found watching, Orlando Pirates or Manchester United... or attending services at the Zion Christian Church in Alexandra.

“Johannesburg is the place of gold...and for me it is where I grew up. I look forward to taking more responsibility as my career progresses.”
